

Subject matter of the dissertation: Phraseological units with the semantics of color terms (on the basis of French language)

Author of the dissertation: Bekishieva Medina

Scientific supervisor of the master's dissertation: Levina N. N.

Information about customer organization: Department of French philology and the intercultural communications

Topicality of the research:

The topic of the dissertation is connected with the fact that study of color terms provides rich material for reflection of linguistic color fragment of the French language picture of the world and expands the knowledge about the features of the color designation in the French linguistic culture and allows to deepen the understanding of the cognitive activity of the person recorded in the names of various properties, characteristics, qualities of objects of reality.

Objective: study and classification of phraseological units with the semantics of color terms in French in accordance with the characteristics of the color designation in the French linguistic culture.

Tasks:

1. To analyze the works of foreign and domestic linguists on the problem of representation in the language of color
2. To highlight aspects and areas of study units with the semantics of the language color terms
3. To identify phraseological units with the semantics of color in French
4. To arrange selected phraseological units on the criterion of use idioms of a particular color to indicate the objects, objects or features.

Theoretical and practical significance of the research:

The theoretical significance of the research consists in classification of phraseological units of the French language with the semantics of color terms in accordance with the notions or phenomena that will expand and complement the existing knowledge about the semantics of color terms and the possibility of application of materials research in the teaching of courses of lexicology, intercultural communication and translation theory.

Results of the research: the realization of assigned tasks and goals

Recommendations: the actual material can be used during lecture courses of the lexicology, the intercultural communication and the translation's theory