

Subject matter: Comic elements in children speech

Author: Alana Baskaeva

Supervisor of studies: Tatyana Filippovna Petrenko, professor of French philology and cross-cultural communication chair.

Information about customer organisation: Chair of French philology and cross-cultural communication.

Topicality of the research: is explained by scientific interest in playing potential as source of comic and in the problem of linguistic creativity of child.

Objective of the research: the research of stylistic means of creating a comic effect in the speech of a French child.

Tasks of the research: to reveal modern methods of analysing comic elements, the forms of comic elements and linguostilistic methods that are used by children to express them.

Theoretical and practical significance: were associated with the objective: to use the materials courses stylistics and linguocultural courses.

Results of the research: summing up all found information, we can conclude that children's speech is interesting because it is filled with different stylistic paths, which gives it a comic effect.

Recommendations: the results of the study represent the practical significance to linguists specializing in the study of child's speech.