Summary

Subject matter: Category of recipient in polylogue.

Author: KurbanovaViktoriaNurudinovna

Supervisor of studies: AjrapetovGurgenEduardovich

Information about customer organization: Departement of French philology and the intercultural communications.

Topicality of the research: consists in necessity of the communication's study, as complex process, and of the communicants' roles in it. For achieving of the best results in successful communication, we have to understand and study its structure.

The objective of the research: consists in the revelation of recipient's peculiarities and features in the process of communication interaction with other participants of polylogue.

Tasks of research:

1. Describe the concept "speech act", examine its structure;
2. Study the forms of communication interaction and reveal distinctions between them;
3. Study the structure of polylogue;
4. Describe the participants of communication and determine the meaning of their roles;
5. Examine the speech behavior in polylogue and reveal its distinctive features;
6. Determine collective and single recipient.

Theoretical and practical significance:the analysis of such difficult phenomena can give the opportunity to reveal some latent questions that will allow going further in linguistic, sociologic and psycholinguistic researches.

Results of the research: polylogue is the most difficult of the communication forms according to its structure and mechanism of distribution of roles between the participants of speech act, and the presence of "third" recipient give to it some abruptness. The recipient acquires new possibilities and features in polylogue, attracting great scientific interest.

Recommendations: the results of research in the form of certain theses in further researches of communication phenomenon and in the process of speech realization