

Summary

Theme of qualifying work "Psychological conditions of development of personal resources of students as the factor of successful professional self-determination" .

Author: LE Shorova

Supervisor : PhD. psychol. Associate Professor, Department of General and Educational Psychology Institute of the human being VPO "PSLU" MM Erkenova.

Information about the contracting authority: Psychological service VPO "KBSU."

Relevance of the research topic. The current situation of social development characterized by the growing influence of personal resources on human life. This is especially true in relation to student age. Relevance of the work due to extreme demand for prevention of personal rastrojstv students and insufficient development of practice-oriented comprehensive programs for its implementation, based on a systematic approach.

Objective: To determine the role of personal resources of university students in the development of professional self-determination.

Tasks:

1. To consider the theoretical basis of the study of individual psychological characteristics of personality of students.
2. To analyze the specificity of professional self-study.
3. To choose a valid diagnostic equipment and conduct diagnostic testing of psychological conditions of the development of personal resources as a factor in the successful students of professional self-determination.
4. To analyze using methods of mathematical statistics of individual psychological characteristics of students with an orientation on the individual case and the orientation of the person, and to communicate - as psychological criteria of successful professional self-determination.

5. To develop a program for the development of personal resources of students in order to create conditions for successful professional self-determination.

Theoretical and practical significance of the study. Revealed the psychological conditions of development of personal resources of students. The results of the study can be used in the conducting of individual psychological counseling and remedial developmental activities with the students, the development of seminars and programs for the prevention of various forms of conduct. The developed program of personal resources as a factor in students' successful professional psychological services of various universities. Personal development program resurov, can be used for the organization of psychological support of personality development of students, the implementation of individual and group preventive work.

Results of the study. This qualifying work we have identified psychological conditions that ensure the development of personal resurov in professional activity among students. As a result of ascertaining experiment program was compiled of personal resources. It has developed a program of development of students' personal resources as a factor in a successful career in the format provided by PowerPoint.

Recommendation.

1. It is recommended to carry out regular awareness-raising activities to illustrate the relevance of psychological knowledge for university students.
2. To diagnose manifestations of individual psychological characteristics of personality of students.
3. To organize activities for relaxation and psychological relief in order to create conditions for personal growth.

4. To involve the students to participate in group work aimed at improving the emotional well-organized psychological service of the University.
5. To organize service of psychological personality-group educational sessions on the development of personal reflection and development of the desire for personal growth.