Supervisor: Candidate of Historical Sciences, Associate Professor of the Department of Creative-Innovative Management and Law Chekmenev D.S.

Relevance of the research: The priority task of the government, especially in a modern period of crisis and social instability, is to create conditions for effective working of systems, aimed at the support of vulnerable groups which are most suffered from the crisis. And the most numerous category – the category of senior citizens - refers to this social group.

Crisis conditions of recent years, new challenges which Russia faces with, new laws' enactment, which sometimes derogate from rights, cause that retired people due to their age are not always ready to keep track of it all, clarify the innovations and solve their problems reasonably.

With the purposes of solution of the identified problems, the analysis of the theoretical and practical foundations of the modern system of servicing pensioners, including their socio-legal support and determination of ways of its' improving, is not without interest.

Theoretical and practical significance of the research:

Theoretical developments make it possible to develop and deepen theoretical ideas in research on the problems of social protection system.

The practical significance of the research is the possibility of proposed recommendations using in the simulation of socio-legal support of senior citizens to improve the effectiveness of municipal social service centres activities.

The results of the study: After reviewing the system of socio-legal support of retired people in Pyatigorsk integrated social service centre, we came to the conclusion that the socio-legal services, which are the basis of social and legal support of aged people, are in the current work of most parts of the Centre. To increase the informational and educational level of pensioners trough the sociolegal education in 2015-2016 years, the innovative program “The pensioner and the law” was carried out by the legal-advisor of the Centre. According the analysis of the results of the activities of the Centre for socio-legal support the greatest growth was shown by socio-legal services on the number of services per client. It means that this type of service became demanded.

Recommendations: To meet the needs of socio-legal support in Pyatigorsk, it is proposed to establish a Cabinet of socio-legal "ambulance" for pensioners. The relevance of this project is conditioned by the increasing of frauds of pensioners and growing variety of schemes which are used by fraudsters, in most cases, against the older-people. The project includes the following main activities: providing of information; advertising and promotion of socio-legal orientation; provision of urgent assistance to older persons in difficult situation in socio-legal and psychological spheres, classes with retirees wishing a good understanding in all aspects of social and legal support, including the topics of socio-legal security.

Moreover, there was invented a booklet “Do not succumb to fraudsters” for older-people. The booklet could be spread in paper and electronic form as well: electronic booklets were invented in two most popular formats for reading on Smartphones (fb2 and epub.).
