The theme of final work: Typology of a subordinating syntactic link in the German, English and Russian languages

Author: Bondar Julia Nikolaevna

Scientific leader: Janukjan T.G. Professor of chair of Germanic studies and cross-cultural communication.

Relevance of research is caused by an insufficient readiness of a problem in relation to three considered languages in the comparative plan.

Purpose of research: to examine the kinds of the subordinating link and their currency into every language and in the comparison with each other.

The results of the research project are demonstrated in 2 chapters.

As a result we have:

- All three types of subordinating link — agreement, government and parataxis are inherent in languages;
- German and Russian languages find a considerable typological divergence;
- English holds special position on character of a syntactic link; The results of the work are captured into the conclusion.

In the end the literary sources are specified.
