

ABSTRACT

Subject matter: Modern English slang and methods of its translation into Russian by the example of the television series The Inbetweeners.

Author: Ekaterina Kramarova, Bachelor program student, Institute of Distant Education and Information and Communication Technologies Development.

Research Supervisor: N.V. Karatseva, Lecturer of the Chair of Theory and Practice of Translation and Interpretation.

Information about the sponsor organization: Pyatigorsk State University, 9 Kalinin St., Pyatigorsk, Stavropol krai.

The understanding of the native speakers' language is the international problem. Our secondary schools teach the students only the bases of the English language. They do not prepare them to the British streets, accommodations, pubs where people use their own language - they use slang.

Slang is not a harmful language formation, but is a necessary part of the system of modern speech. It is constantly changing, developing, can be instantly formed, and disappear forever. All changes in the language associated with the appearance of slang are based on the simplification and understanding of oral speech. Slang itself is a living and dynamic system that is used in various spheres of human life.

The language of the previous centuries contrasts from the modern language. Life does not freeze in the same position. It always develops. And it makes the language develop too. That is why the theme of the research work is relevant.

The object of the research is slang that is frequently used in everyday life of young people.

The aim of the work is to identify the difficulties of translation of modern English slang into Russian.

In the first part of this paper we present slang as a specific lexis in language system.

The second part deals with the methods of Modern English slang translation into Russian by the example of the television series «The Inbetweeners»”.

The conclusion contains the general results of the research performed. Slang is the people's voice. It's changing daily so we are to stay aware of its meanings and keep checking since they may change tomorrow. The present research is of great importance as a source of basic data on modern slang and its translation into Russian.