

Summary

Subject matter: Communicative - semantic features of spontaneous utterances in French

Author: Pliskina Ksenia Ur'evna

Supervisor of studies: Keleinikova Alia Georgievna, candidate of philological sciences, professor of French philology and intercultural communications

Information about customer organization: Chair of french philology and the intercultural communications

Topicality of the research: the relevance of this work is the lack of sufficiently complete a comprehensive study of French syntax features of spontaneous speech

Objectives of the research: the aim is to establish the essential specific communicative utterances and syntactic features as the basic unit of the French spontaneous speech

Tasks of the research: to determine the status of the French spontaneous speech, to justify the choice of the basic unit of the French spontaneous speech, set the function of the components of the French spontaneous utterance with communicative and syntactic point of view.

Theoretical and practical significance: The theoretical significance of the results of the study is that it is held for the first time a comprehensive analysis of the French spontaneous utterances as the basic unit of the French spontaneous conversational speech and The practical value of this work lies in the fact that its materials can be used in teaching the French language, as well as in the preparation of academic courses on the style and grammar of the French language, in the preparation of special courses on fonostilistike grammar and speaking French.

Results of the research: French spontaneous speech is distinctive and gives preference to certain means of expression of meaning, sometimes different from those used by non-spontaneous speech. Spontaneous speech - speech unprepared generated by word of mouth, codified or uncoded - is found in various areas of interpersonal communication.

Recommendations: the results of the research can be recommended to translators and interpreters, to professors of French linguistics working at different types of educational and linguistic programmes.